PAUSE

In that uneven hour that separates life from death, we reach back yearning for the past, longing to be among lost friends and dimmed memories, we scoff at our mistakes and look back in envy at our triumphs, no matter how small;
as our flame suddenly dies
we grasp for the thin air
that surrounds our minds,
slowly we follow a shadow,
down a hard, wind beaten path,
barefoot, alone, hungry,
getting caught in a swamp
of quicksand until we shrink into a
silent, feeble
sound.

Socialization

Compromise
your impulses
and
the interests
of other people
and become a human person.

Compromise
the flushing waters
that
wash your mind
and
make you trail
the cunning course
of the great machine.

Compromise
the solitary state
in which
you come
to know
who, and why,
and how.

Compromise
and awake
to fall asleep
into the crowds
of puppets
and become one.

Compromise
to lose
as the rest have lost
themselves
like you.

"Seth Waves Back" R.D.

Being the first spring Sunday,
Seth's existence had to be verified.
So he stood by a break in the concrete Gazing at a chicken wing,
As the roof of his mouth turned to a pane of glass While his diamond shaped tongue
Tried to relinquish its petrification.

Everyone turned and smiled for him,
He was no more than a silhouette.
As they stared from their orange-painted picnic table
They kept their cheeks creased.

Seth stood alone!
He could see them more clearly—but not feel.
He could see the food—but not taste.
He thought of the past—as they did.
He thought of the immediate—as they did.
They thought of the future.

They turned to wave excitedly to him,
As he raised his hand to the right of his head,
Then waved with his entire body;
From 100 feet to here.
